

Security Surveillance

Published by ProSecureNewsonline.co.uk

A specialist publication featuring in-depth case studies and application studies

Having the opportunity to explain how your system works comprehensively together with descriptive diagrams and photographs to multiple purchasers/specifiers can be extremely difficult to organise and can incur vast costs. ProSecureNewsonline is able to offer you the opportunity to do just this at a fraction of the cost.

In October 2011 we will be publishing the first of our Special printed publications focusing on Surveillance Systems, featuring in-depth case studies and application stories from a host of suppliers and integrators.

The publication is supported by BSIA, ONVIF and the Institute of Security Management who will be contributing to the forward.

Reaching over 7,500 purchasers/specifiers this specialist supplement will give you the opportunity to deliver detailed descriptions of projects in which your system has been used, the technology partners you work with and the benefits of the system to the customer once in situ. This will give potential customers and specifiers more understanding of how your systems could work within their future contracts.

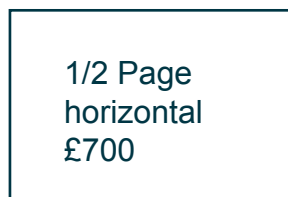

Editorial Contributors

Participants within the feature have two options; for only £3500 you can take a 4 page section comprising up to 2000 words, 5 images and a boxed panel listing the contact details and logo together with any logos of technology partners, and web addresses. One of the pages can be used as an advertisement page. The second option is for only £1800 you can have a two page section, with up to 1200 words, 2 images, logo and logos of technology partners with web addresses.

There is also just a standard advertising option of ½ page £700 and full page £1250

The publication will also be published in an electronic version on ProSecureNewsonline.co.uk and promoted on the weekly newsletter. Participants will also have the opportunity to have extra print runs of their articles and an electronic version.
